FOR INTERNATIONAL POLICY

The Lowy Institute for International Policy is an independent policy think tank. Its mandate ranges across all the dimensions of international policy debate in Australia — economic, political and strategic — and it is not limited to a particular geographic region. Its two core tasks are to:

- produce distinctive research and fresh policy options for Australia's international policy and to contribute to the wider international debate
- promote discussion of Australia's role in the world by providing an accessible and high-quality forum for discussion of Australian international relations through debates, seminars, lectures, dialogues and conferences.

The views expressed in this paper are entirely the author's own and not those of the Lowy Institute for International Policy.

AUSTRALIAN OPINION ON BRITISH EXIT FROM EUROPEAN UNION

A majority of Australians think the United Kingdom should stay in the European Union, according to new Lowy Institute polling.

In a decisive result, 51% of Australian adults say the United Kingdom 'should remain a member of the European Union', while only 19% say it should leave.

Further, when asked about the impact of Brexit on the European Union, most Australians anticipate that the EU will sustain some damage. Around a third of the population (29%) believe that Brexit 'will lead to the break-up of the European Union over time'. A significant number (41%) say 'the European Union will be damaged but it will recover'. Very few say that 'there will be no impact on the European Union' (11%).

TABLES OF QUESTIONS AND RESULTS

These results are drawn from a nationally representative mobile and fixed-line telephone survey of 1002 Australian adults between 1 and 9 June 2016, conducted by Field Works Market Research on behalf of the Lowy Institute. The Poll's maximum sampling variance is approximately +/- 3.1%.
